Pakistani drama serial gets an International release

While drama serial Aisi Hai Tanhai, featuring Sonya Hussyn, Sami Khan and Nadia Khan in key roles, became quite successful after going on air last year, the good news is that recently the play has had its international release.

Based on issues like cyber bullying and slut-shaming in a conservative society like ours, Aisi Hai Tanhai has been redubbed in Arabic and is already on air on MBC Bollywood for Arab viewers around the world. The TV channel is known for airing Bollywood movies and Indian soaps for the consumption of the Arab Diaspora in France, Germany, Sweden, Netherlands, UK and Canada.

Moreover, actor Sami Khan also took to his official Instagram page to share the news and wrote, "Aisi Hai Tanhai starting in KSA." The play, written by Mohsin Ali and directed by Badar Mehmood, highlights how the life of a girl turns upside down when her intimate photos are leaked online.

This is not the first time that a Pakistani play is getting an international release. MCB Bollywood has earlier aired the Mahira and Fawad Khan starrer Humsafar.

This art exhibition aims to promote Pakistan's natural beauty

A three-day group exhibition titled Beautiful Pakistan started on Monday at the Rawalpindi Arts Council (RAC).

The exhibition featured more than 100 art pieces, mostly oil-on-canvas of Pakistani landscape and 30 artists have contributed their paintings to the show.

There were also portraits of people, showcasing their lives in deserts, mountains and cities. The paintings are simple but attractive due to their interesting colour schemes.

One of the artists, Mehmood Ali, had painted the mountains and plains of the country. He said Pakistan is blessed with natural beauty and that the exhibition was started with an aim to showcase the natural beauty of the desk. He has mostly used oil colours.

Another artist, Mohammad Nawaz Khan said he used to paint in various locations in the twin cities to capture the real essence of life in the cities.

He said he has painted the routine lives of people and that the love Pakistanis have for art is evident in the artwork to be found on buildings, vehicles and other objects. Madiha Baig, a contributor to the show, said the group exhibition had provided artists with an opportunity to present the beauty of their country and junior artists had an opportunity to learn from senior artists.

She said portraits of common people are important and that she has tried to depict social issues with her paintings.

Artist Malika Mushahid said she was inspired to paint landscapes and that she likes working on site. She said it was difficult to bring life to the canvas but she has tried.

RAC Director Waqar Ahmed lauded the artists for their work and said they help promote a soft image of the country by raising awareness of its natural beauty.

He said the council has decided to hold events for celebrating Independence Day from Aug 10 to August 14.

The exhibition will continue till August 9.

Mountaineering: Scaling The Savage Mountain

Climbing K2 is somewhat akin to a fatal attraction that many mountaineers cannot resist. The world's second-highest peak, feared as the 'Savage Mountain,' was first conquered on July 31, 1954, by Italian mountaineers Achille Compagnoni and Lino Lacedelli with the help of their porter, Amir Mahdi, from Hunza.

Sixty years later, on June 14, 2014, history repeated itself with a little help from good fate. Eight high-altitude porters from Gilgit-Baltistan, hoping to take their career to the next level, set off on the first all-Pakistani expedition to the K2 summit this time as mountaineers.

The Italians have had an everlasting love for the K2. They have been associated with the mountain and the Karakoram since 1909, sharing an equal responsibility for its conservation and facilitating mainstream climbing. Polenza first scaled the K2 from the north side in 1983 and has since been the team leader of three successful expeditions to the K2, reportedly his 'charmed' mountain.

Although lucky himself, Ploenza is wary of the perennial dangers of the sport and ensured that the porters went through extensive training before taking on the notorious K2. Just last year, the Pakistan Army recovered the bodies of mountaineers who were swallowed by a snow storm during their climb and the bodies of the three other climbers who were caught by an avalanche have yet to be found. At a height of over 8,000 metres, it is foolish to leave anything to chance.

41 paintings of maestros are being restored at Lahore Arts Council

The paintings include works by Ana Molka Ahmed, Colin David, Mian Ijaz-ul-Hassan and other acclaimed painters

The Lahore Arts Council (LAC) will achieve a milestone after completing the restoration of 41 damaged paintings of maestros.

These works have been preserved at the Alhamra Art Museum at Cultural Complex, Qaddafi Stadium, officials told Dawn.

They said the process of restoring the paintings of the masters of yesteryears officially started back in 2016 when the council held a grand workshop under the title 'Saving the Dying Art'. The workshop was a collaborative effort between the Lahore Arts Council and the Danish Center for Culture and Development and introduced many restorers.

"The 33 paintings which have been restored now and eight which are still to be restored are not part of that project. These paintings are from the Punjab Council of Arts and being restored by the restorers who attended that workshop," said LAC Director Art and Culture Zulfiqar Ali.

The paintings which are under restoration process are by Ana Molka Ahmed, Colin David, Mian Ijaz-ul-Hassan and other acclaimed painters.

Mr Ali said the council had trained 60 or so artists to treat the damaged paintings which is a difficult art. The master artists whose paintings were restored during the workshop included Ustad Allah Bux, Sadequain, Shamza, S. Safdar, Zubaida Agha, Zakia Dil and Saeed Akhtar. The restored paintings were about 50 to 60 years old, he added.

He said an exhibition of the restored paintings would be held in near future and the seasoned and emerging artists would be invited. The restorers would also brief the audience on their respective projects and the technical process they went through during the treatment of paintings.

Mohammad Irfan sets world record for most economical T20 spell

Pakistan fast bowler Mohammad Irfan has set the world record for the most economical bowling spell in T20 history while playing for the Barbados Tridents in the Caribbean Premier League (CPL).

Irfan picked up two wickets Chris Gayle and Evin Lewis and conceded just one run from his four overs against the St Kitts and Nevis Patriots in Bridgetown.

The first 23 deliveries of his spell were all dot balls while the batsman denied him a fourth consecutive maiden over by scoring a run off his 24th and final delivery which helped the quick register figures of 4-3-1-2.

PSL audit report cites significant discrepancies in season 1, 2

This record was previously shared by South Africa's Chris Morris and Sri Lanka's Chanaka Welegedara with an economy rate of 0.5 per over while Irfan's economy rate of 0.25 was better than the duo.

Morris notched up figures of 4-3-2-2 for the Cape Cobras in South Africa's Ram Slam in November 2014 while Chanaka Welegedara's numbers were 4-2-2-4 for Tamil Union in Sri Lanka during April 2015.

Despite Irfan's superb bowling spell, the Tridents were not able to get over the line and suffered their second defeat in four matches of this year's CPL.

Patriots captain Chris Gayle won the toss and asked the Jason Holder-led Tridents to bat first.

The home side managed 147 runs for the loss of six wickets in their allotted 20 overs. Holder was the top scorer with 54 runs off 35 balls while Shai Hope and Dwayne Smith scored 26 and 20 runs respectively. For the Patriots, Kiwi spinner Anton Devcich and Aussie pacer Ben Cutting picked up two wickets each.

PM Imran nominates Asad Ali Khan, Ehsan Mani as members of PCB BoG

In reply, the visitors found it difficult to tackle the bowling spell of Irfan during the early stages of their innings but once the Pakistan quick was finished with his spell the team recovered nicely to chase down the target with seven balls and six wickets to spare. Brandon King scored 60 runs off 49 balls with the help of four fours and five sixes.

Due to his record-breaking spell of fast bowling, Irfan was declared player of the match.

"I'm really happy. I would've been happier if the team won, but I am happy that I bowled one of the best spells in T20 cricket," said Irfan after the match. "I liked bowling on the lively wicket, and I get extra bounce because of my height, so yes, a satisfying performance."

Transgender singers Lucky and Naghma steal the show in Coke Studio wedding track

Titled Baalkada, the song also features Jimmy Khan:

And they even get to dedicate a bit of the song to the unrelenting spirit of the transgender community.

The inclusion of transgender singers Lucky and Naghma in Coke Studio was cause for a lot of buzz when the Season 11 teaser came out.

With the release of 'Baalkada', it's clear that the hype was worth it. The duo owns the stage in this quirky wedding track that also features Jimmy Khan: And they even get to dedicate a bit of the song to the unrelenting spirit of the transgender community.

While there has been some criticism that featuring Lucky and Naghma on a wedding track is a form of stereotyping, it's important to note that the song is said to be their "first appearance" on the show and there's more to come.

Homage paid to Dr Ruth Pfau on her first death anniversary

Holding a lone red rose in one hand and a little white candle in the other, the patients, staff and guests at the Marie Adelaide Leprosy Centre (MALC) observed the first death anniversary of Dr Ruth Pfau on Friday.

Earlier, the Society of the Daughters of the Heart of Mary also commemorated the occasion at the St Patrick's Cathedral, where Cardinal Joseph Coutts carried out the holy mass with the priests of the Karachi dioceses in her memory followed by a visit to the graveyard.

Pfau was a German doctor and nun, who dedicated 57 years of her life to eradicating leprosy from Pakistan. Born in Leipzig in 1929, she first came to Pakistan in 1960 as a missionary while serving her order, the Society of the Daughters of the Heart of Mary. Her devotion to doing something in and for Pakistan took her to become Pakistan's leprosy fighter. Actually, her real destination was India but she got stuck in Karachi owing to a visa issue.

That was when she came across the poor lepers here. Disowned by their own families, they were left with no other choice but to beg for alms. But even if they had money, vendors or shopkeepers refused to sell them bread as they were seen as untouchables. The young doctor from Germany decided to help them. She stayed back and grew old in Pakistan, which she made her home while always being available to them. Not only did she treat them, she also gave them back their dignity by visiting their families and raising awareness of the illness. She changed people's thinking and removed the stigma regarding leprosy.

Joining MALC, she managed to set up a network of 157 medical centres that treated thousands of people and the hard work paid off when the World Health Organisation declared leprosy under control in Pakistan in 1996. She was also granted Pakistani citizenship in 1988 and she received numerous accolades for her services, including the Hilal-i-Imtiaz, Nishan-i-Quaid-i-Azam and Hilal-i-Pakistan.

Those who worked with her at MALC or its various centres remembered her kindness to patients, even those who reacted violently during treatment due to pain. A video, 'Tribute to Dr Ruth Pfau, a life lived for others', was played during the remembrance ceremony. There were clips of her treating patients and travelling to the remotest of places in Pakistan with her team to help people with leprosy while also training volunteers. The video showed her grow old from a young energetic doctor but still engaged in selfless work. Then during the scenes of her funeral, the entire staff of the hospital stood up in respect. Some had tears in their eyes.

Abdus Salam, a field officer who was lucky enough to have worked with her, said that he learned everything, big or small, from Dr Pfau. "Every day as I work I remember something or the other that she had taught me. She really cared for all her patients and we try following in her footsteps," he said.

Atiq ur Rehman, a well-respected member of the business community of Karachi and donor to MALC, said that he used to watch her work because it helped him gather inspiration. "Here was this doctor, herself so old and weak, and yet she wouldn't tire of helping others. She will always remain alive in our hearts," he said.

Pakistan hockey team beat Kazakhstan 16-0 in their third Pool B match of the ongoing Asian Games in Jakarta.

Men in Green, who bagged 10-0 win each against Thailand and Oman in their first two matches, made sure they decimated their opponents from the word go.

Muhammad Atiq also scored one goal each for Pakistan.

"We have won all three matches and haven't conceded any goal but Malaysia is another team which is on a winning streak and they will be tough to face," skipper Muhammad Rizwan senior told The Express Tribune.

Asian Games hockey: India demolish Hong Kong 26-0 in record hockey win

He added that the team needs to stay composed to beat Malaysia. "Till now we are in full shape, form and in coordination. If we keep playing like this, then we can win the match against Malaysia. They are one of the top teams of the competition, if we beat them then that will increase our chances to win the gold medal," he said.

Pakistan will next face Malaysia on August 26, before facing Bangladesh on August 28 to complete their Pool B matches.

One more win for the Men in Green will mean they qualify for the semi-finals of the Asian Games hockey event, scheduled to take place on August 30, with the final to be played on September 1.

A trip to Naltar Valley made me proud of Pakistan's natural beauty

An isolated haven of sheer beauty, Naltar lies tucked away from the hustle bustle of Gilgit-Baltistan's town and cities. Nestled among snow-topped peaks and towering forests, the valley is home to what are referred to as the tastiest potatoes in the world.

Every tourist's journey to Naltar begins by leaving behind the Karakoram Highway at Gilgit for an adventurous two-hour jeep ride. The fact that cars can't be driven from Gilgit to Naltar is testament to the bumpy and somewhat arduous track. However, for those with the slightest clue of what beauty lies in the valley, the journey is simply part of the experience and is most certainly worth taking.

Reaching Naltar Bala, the center of the valley, one is absolutely spell-bound by the beauty of the area. What makes Naltar particularly unique is also that its forest cover is vaster than other areas of the country. The entire landscape is truly delightful to the eyes.

In the evening as the sunlight gradually disappears, the few residents of the valley return to their homes after working the fields during the day. Stars begin to emerge, which combined with the silence of the night, make for an exquisitely serene atmosphere. Further into the night, aided by the lack of light pollution, the Milky Way emerges from behind the mountains. The view leaves you absolutely speechless.

During the winters, Naltar offers a wonderful experience of skiing on its famous slopes that attract tourists by the droves. The ski resort is run by the Pakistan Air Force, along with the recently installed ski lifts that take skiers to the top of the slope.

The ski slope during the summers Naltar is home to three magnificent lakes known collectively as the Bashkiri Lakes. Located at a distance of 13km from Naltar Bala, it takes about an hour of travelling on unmetalled roads to reach them. All along the route, which is a dirt track, glacial streams can be seen flowing across the verdant valley floor. Due to the ample vegetation, these are ideal grazing grounds, attracting Gujjar nomads who travel here with their cattle.

At two points in particular, the river and a large glacial stream cut across the track and as a result, the local jeep drivers are required to utilise their experience and skills in order to navigate them. During the winters however, these lakes remain inaccessible as the route is blocked by up to 15 feet of snow.

As the jeep made its way to the first lake on our way, I tried to picture the lakes I had seen in photographs before. But nothing prepared me for my first sight of Satrangi Lake. I was left awestruck.

After all, it was hard to believe that a lake could reflect as many colours as this one from having seen just a couple of pictures. True to its name which means seven coloured, the most prominent colours were blue, green and surprisingly, yellow, a colour I had never seen before in a lake. The calm, peaceful water lay still as the underwater plants particularly algae provided more colour from under the pristine water surface.

Visiting Naltar was an exquisite experience to say the least. The beauty of the region must be experienced in person to fully appreciate it. The only obstacle remains the tough road but that's tolerable considering the invaluable experience that awaits. Over the years, the place has developed to a certain extent, having a couple of hotels to accommodate tourists as compared to none in the recent past, providing an ideal opportunity to visit this region. Meet Pakistan's first and only international female mixed martial arts practitioner

"I wanted to beat the stereotypical thinking that girls are not strong enough," says MMA fighter Anita Karim

Five seconds into the fight, Anita Karim who had stepped on to the octagonal mat for the very first time after only one year of training confidently landed her left hand on her opponent's face, throwing the experienced Nyrene Crowley off balance.

The far more experienced Kiwi fighter was taken by surprise. She spent the entire first round defending herself against Anita's powerful strikes. It was in the final seconds of the initial round that Crowley came back to her senses and threw Anita on the floor. The inexperienced Anita found it a bit tough to fight on the floor. Her opponent exploited this, and got her in a rear choke in the second round. Anita lost the fight... but had made it abundantly clear that she was here to stay.

The first ever female mixed martial arts (MMA) fighter of Pakistan, who started practicing taekwondo at an early age in Hunza with her brothers, is not disheartened by the defeat. She is determined to learn from her mistakes and get back to the ring stronger to walk off as the winner one day.

MMA is still a growing sport in Pakistan and not so popular among the female population of the country. Anita did not have a female companion to train with or to compete against, so she trained with her brother and other male practitioners of martial arts under the supervision of the well-known trainer, Ehtisham Karim. When she arrived in Islamabad from Hunza, she was given a choice between higher studies or a professional MMA career. She picked the latter, despite knowing the challenges.

Anita Karim is Pakistan's first and only international female practitioner of mixed martial arts. Her rise has been as much about her determination to take on a male-oriented society as her dedication to hard work and training.
